Cockroach

the story of a chase!

A hot summers' night - too hot to sleep - tossing, turning... Time to get up. A cockroach scampers across the room. The chase begins. Cockroaches are quick, sneaky, and unpredictable. They can run and hide in tiny dark places. No cracks in the wall are too small for this treacherous creature. No obstacle too challenging. It has no fear of defeat! The cockroach changes direction suddenly. It scurries, it hides, it teases. Determined to win against an enemy more than 1000 times its own size - the cockroach takes on the ultimate challenge. To the death! Up the wall, down the lampshade, behind the bookshelf, over the table, under the couch - and then finally - a victory! (But not for the cockroach!) This much-loathed insect does demand some respect however. A cockroach can survive without eating for up to one month, it can also live for about a week with no head. They can run up to 3 kilometers an hour and have been known to hold their breath underwater for around 45 minutes!
